

Large estate release show lots of interest

CONSTRUCTION has commenced on Terranovis' Ocean Road Estate Coogee, part of a new development that will eventually be home to a population of about 1000 people.

Terranovis sales representative Kaylene McTernan said that interest in the estate had been strong since sales were launched earlier in the year.

"We made the first release quite a large one of 70 lots, because we got so much interest from prospective buyers before the estate was even launched," Ms McTernan.

"We've seen a lot of interest from people already living in the area, and from others who grew up around Coogee and are coming back to raise their own families."

Together with the Port Coogee marina, Ocean Road is set to transform the coastal strip of the City of Cockburn, much of which was market gardens.

The estate has been designed with environmental harmony in mind, with landscaped parks and gardens set to make up nearly eight hectares of public open space in the final development.

A landscaped pedestrian promenade will link residents with the beach and the marina village at Port Coogee.
